Ogden City Officials to Residents: "Thank You for Conserving Water!"

After several years of below-average snowpack, mindful use of water has been a priority request from water managers to customers. "We are proud of our residents and business owners for their efforts and want to send them a huge thanks," said Ogden's Water Manager, Brady Herd. "It is evident in our capacities and production that we are using less water as a whole."

In comparing the City's 2022 water production totals during the months of April through July with the same period in 2021, there has been a 14.6% reduction. In comparing those same months in 2022 with the average from the previous two years, there has been a 17% reduction! This is attributed in part to factors including outdoor watering conservation, replacement of old, leaky pipes, and reduction of use in individual households.

As residents continue to conserve water, Pineview Reservoir has begun to realign with historical statistics slowly. As of Monday, August 8th Pineview's storage capacity was at 48% compared to 26% of capacity on the same day in 2021. These water stores are critical, particularly when planning for the future.

Ogden residents are encouraged to continue with their individual efforts and are invited to come into the public works building to get a free moisture meter and conservation kit. Water customers can also set up a water audit with the water conservation coordinator to see if there is anything else that can be adjusted.

Make Ogden Purple: October 1-8

The "Make Ogden Purple" initiative is intended to serve as a visual reminder during homecoming week of the connection between Ogden City and Weber State, as well as a representation of community pride.

Weber State was founded in 1889 and now proudly boasts 326,084 alumni whose accomplishments and community connections are worth Making Ogden Purple.

WHAT: Small Idea, Big Impact. A grassroots effort to establish a college town culture within the Ogden

WHY: College Towns have an excellent sports scene, multiple attractions, improved local health care, diversity, career opportunities, and are often close-knit. College towns also have a sense of community pride and a balanced cost of living and quality of life.

HOW: How you do it is really up to you. The key is for you, your family, or your business to participate in fun, creative ways. For example, wear purple, display WSU gear, fly a Weber State flag, or decorate your front door. Most importantly, participate. Be creative and share to inspire others to get involved as well.
